Homemakers to Compete for Honors

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansas Homemakers of tomorrow get together in Little Rock today for their annual convention. More than 3,000 filled Robinson Auditorium for the first session.

The girls represent Future Homemakers of America chapters from high schools all over the state.

An estimated 12,000 are expected to attend the convention, which ends tomorrow. They are arriving in four main groups.

One early arrival was Nina Morton, 17, of Pottsville, who came to Little Rock by car ahead of the Pottsville delegation. This is her fourth trip to the state convention, while she calls "a lot of fun."

The meeting, she said, gives the girls a chance to get together and see how the organization is run.

In addition to comparing notes on chapter activities, the young delegates listen to guest speakers outline various career opportunities. Today, in a "Whales My Line" type of program, they heard a county home demonstration agent and a dietitian explain their work. Purpose of the FHA is to train girls in home management, cooking, sewing and other domestic subjects.

Achievement degrees will be awarded to more than 150 girls during the convention.

The first lieutenant governor was elected in 1926 and took office in 1927 after that office was created by a Constitutional Amendment.

familiar, it has been the setting of countless horse operas since the early days of silent movies. Your goal is Flagstaff, a pleasant lumbering and sportsman's town at the foot of the San Francisco Peaks. From here only your time will determine the number of fascinating things to see or do. There is the Museum of Northern Arizona, featuring excellent archeological and Indian handicraft exhibits; Lowell Observatory where the planet Pluto was discovered; and in winter, skiing at the Arizona Snow-Bowl.

Nearby is Sunset Crater National Monument and Walnut Canyon National Monument, with the mysterious cliff dwellings of an ancient people. The awesome Meteor Crater, a hole with a three-mile circumference punched into the earth ages ago by a visitor from outer space, is a 37-mile detour east on U.S. 65.

Flaming Canyon
Your Magic Circle continues on south from Flagstaff on U.S. Alternate 89 through what many Arizonians consider the most beautiful part of the state — the spectacular Oak Creek Canyon. Here inspiring scenery is made vivid by the colorful cliffs, jagged and pine forests against the flaming red rocks which have eroded into majestic spires, pinnacles and buttes. It is unsurpassed for color cameras.

More samples of prehistoric Indian culture are yours to explore a few miles from Oak Creek Canyon in the Cottonwood-Clarkdale area, by short side trips to Montezuma Castle National Monument and Tuzigoot National Monument.

Next on U.S. Alternate 69 is Jerome, historic mining town that clings precariously to the side of Mingo Mountain, long a famous copper camp. Its cracked and deserted buildings are gradually slipping down the mountainside.

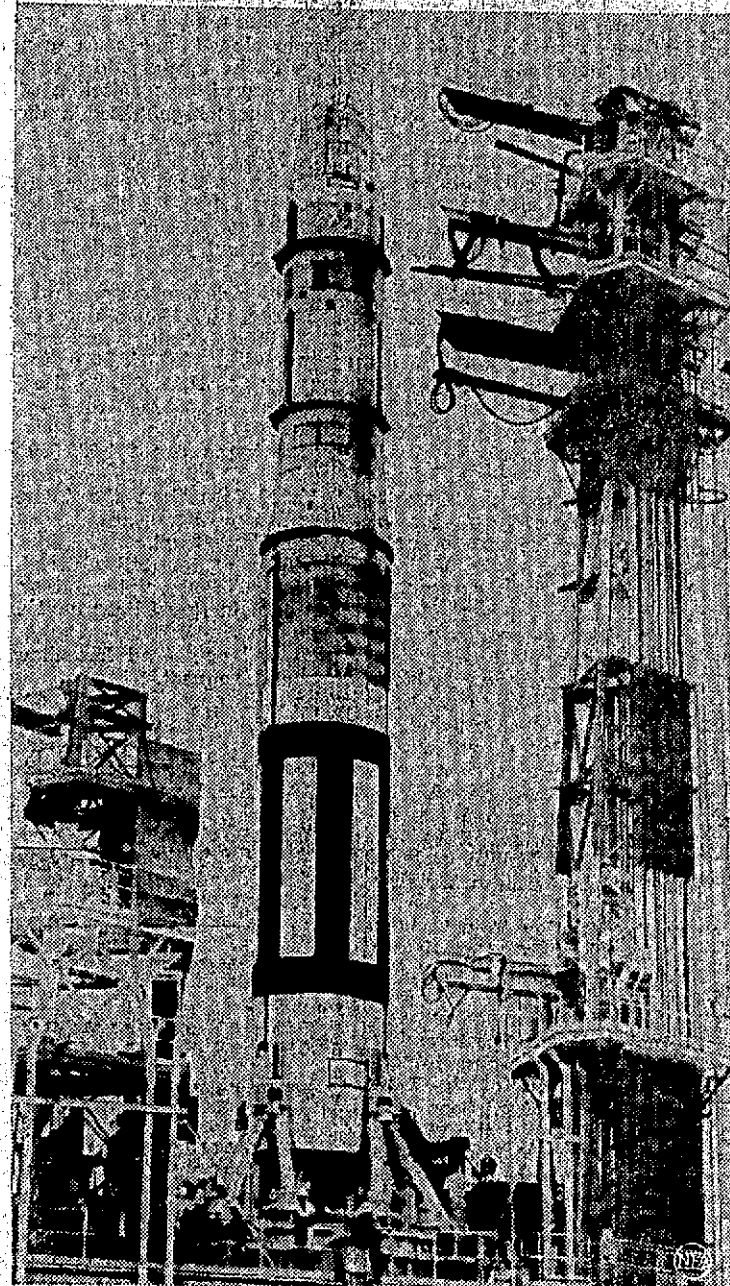

After circling back through Prescott, you continue on to Phoenix via State 89, the Black Canyon highway. This excellent paved road once the old Woolsey Trail used by stage coaches, reveals panorama of brown, blue and purple mountains and lava-topped hills. If time permits, detour at Cordes to Horse Thief Basin, an old outlaw hangout now maintained by the city of Phoenix as a mountain recreation area.

MAGIC CIRCLE TRAVEL NOTES

True Travel Story of the Week
Caring for travelers can be nerve wracking. Take the case of the hysterical maid who came running down the staircase and into the lobby of an Albuquerque, New Mexico hotel. She didn't even pause as she threw down her uniform, screamed that she was quitting and went out the front door. It seems that when she pulled aside the curtain to clean a guest room tub she found a very live alligator snoring up at her. How the two homeward bound college students who occupied the room had been able to smuggle their four foot pet up from the motor lobby is still a mystery. Their surprised explanation: "Why, Bootsie would have caught a cold out in our car — we always bring her in."

A PRESIDENT RELAXES — Argentine President Arturo Frondizi and his family live a simple life in their official Buenos Aires residence, Los Olivos. The 50-year-old lawyer goes through a magazine with his wife, Elena, and their only child, "Elenita," 21, a law student. Frondizi took office in May, 1958, the country's first freely elected president in three decades.

TITANIC — America's newest and biggest intercontinental ballistic missile, the Titan, towers 90 feet above its launching platform at Cape Canaveral, Fla. The liquid-fueled Titan is designed to have a range of 8,000 miles.

Uses Altitude Test to Commit Suicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Air Force spokesman said today that a test chamber was used to commit suicide.

A Pentagon spokesman said it has been established that Airman Walter Moore of Anniston, Ala., killed himself by that method at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz., March 8.

The spokesman said Moore boosted himself to the equivalent of 70,000 feet altitude where there is virtually no air. Life can be sustained at such height only by providing oxygen.

The Air Force said Moore started the pumps on the chamber after all other workers had left about 6 p. m. then entered the chamber. His body was found the next morning. The indicated altitude registered the maximum of 70,000 feet of which the chamber was capable.

His assignment included work in and around the chamber. The Air Force said, adding that he was considered a model airman.

Moore, who attended the University of Arizona during off-duty time, is survived by his mother, Mrs. C. W. Moore, Anniston, Ala.

Money for Arkansas Fish Farm Okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $350,000 appropriation to plan and build a fish farm research station in Arkansas was approved today by the House Appropriations Committee.

The item was included in a bill, approved by the committee, making appropriations for the Interior Department for the year starting July 1.

President Eisenhower had not gotten nothing for the project, Rep. W. E. Norrell (D-Ark), a member of the subcommittee handling the bill, got the item included after obtaining an estimate from department witnesses that $1,385,000 could be utilized on the station.

The project, sponsored by Norrell and Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark) calls for research into production of fish commercially in ponds on idle rice fields.

Cities Reclassified by Phone Union

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Pine Bluff and West Memphis were reclassified in employe wage brackets in a new contract which was reached between Southwest ern Bell Telephone Co. and the Communication Workers of America.

The CWA also sought a higher wage classification for Little Rock, but was unsuccessful on this point.

The new 15-month agreement, announced yesterday at St. Louis, provides for general wage increases ranging from $2.10 to $5.22 a week for nonmanagement and non supervisory employees in five states including Arkansas. Workers in Pine Bluff and West Memphis will receive an additional $3 to $6 a week because of the reclassification.

A Southwestern Bell spokesman said the new contract would mean approximately 3600,000 in wage increases to some 2,700,000 management Arkansas employees.

Friends of Mrs. Douglas Brooks will regret that she remains ill at the Cora Donnelly Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Buchanan of Magnolia have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Johnson and Mrs. Florine Buchanan.

Mrs. H. H. McKenzie, Mrs. C. A. Haynes of Washington and Mrs. Thomas McDaniel of Boughton spent Tuesday in Little Rock with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sutton. Friends will regret that Mrs. Sutton remains ill in Baptist Hospital.

DOROTHY DIX

Is Hubby Responsible For In-Law Troubles?

Dear Dorothy Dix:

After five years of marriage I think I have come upon the answer to why a girl can't get along with her mother-in-law. It's all the man's fault. A husband is looking for trouble when he won't stop talking about how perfect his mother is, how she would raise a family on practically nothing, stay home 7 nights a week, never have a vacation, spend three dollars on one new dress a year and never, never complain. You hear plenty about women adjusting to life. But why can't a man get married and settle for a new way of living? My mother-in-law is a good scout and I like her tremendously. It took a while, though, and all because of my husband. He made his mother sound like a paragon of perfection which I know now she isn't. If hubby wants harmony between his mother and wife, tell him to keep his lips zipped — Jackie.

Dear Jackie: You've definitely got something there, Jackie. A man who can't live without Mom's cooking had better stay home. No two women do things alike and each is entitled to make her own mistakes. That's the only way we learn.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

Last week was my birthday and I invited my steady over for dinner. When he came, he saw a card from an old boy friend of mine and got very angry. Told him the boy meant nothing to me but he didn't believe it. When he left he didn't say when he'd see me again and he hasn't even called since — Worried.

Dear Worried: Let him sulk for a while longer, then call and ask what he's being so silly about. He should be thoroughly ashamed of himself. Everyone gets greeting cards from old friends, that's one of the joys of having a birthday. Too bad you can't see his birthday collection.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I can't make, or keep, friends. The only reason the kids at school bother with me at all is to borrow money. If I'm out of cash they sneer and turn away. A couple of girls depend on me for all their spare money. When they get what they want, they have no use

40 Children Escape Truck-Bus Wreck

MOULTREE, Ga. (AP)—Nearly 40 children escaped with minor injuries when a trailer truck smashed into the rear of a school bus Thursday and cascaded its load of cast iron pipe into the rear of the homeward bound bus. The truck driver, Johnny A. Spears of Anniston, Ala., leaped from his vehicle just before the collision plunged the heavy sections of pipe through the cab. The bus was carrying 39 white school pupils ranging from 6 to 16 years of age. Thirty-seven youngsters were treated for injuries. None was hurt critically. The accident occurred at Doerun, 12 miles northwest of here. Spears was treated for shock and several broken ribs. He said he saw the school bus but did not know it was going to stop until too late. Pieces of cast iron pipe ripped up some of the seats in the rear of the bus and narrowly missed some of the children.

Rep. William L. Ward, 76 of Marianna, is the oldest member of the 62nd General Assembly. He is a lawyer and farmer in Lee county.

Taps Blown for Confederate Vet

SLANT, Va. (AP)—A bugler blew taps. Tears flowed freely. The casket of John Salling was lowered slowly into the ground. Thus did the 112-year-old Civil War veteran reach his final resting place Thursday on a windswept hillside of southwest Virginia. A second funeral service—the first was held earlier at the Gate City Armory—ended the rites for "General John," next-to-the-last survivor of the Civil War. One Walter W. Williams, 116, of Houston, Tex., another Confederate, is left.

El Dorado to Buy Water System

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP)—The El Dorado City Council last night voted to regulate the purchase of the privately-owned El Dorado Water Company. It referred the proposed purchase to its Utilities Committee to see what can be done. Aldermen hope to purchase the water company and use profits from its operation rather than increase sewer rates. One of the other will be necessary to finance sewage disposal improvements, which have been ordered by the Arkansas Pollution Control Commission. Council members said the company, once placed a figure of $2,760,000 on its properties. Regular sessions of the Arkansas General Assembly begin the second Monday in January in odd numbered years.

KILLER AMONG US

© 1958 by Robert Martin
By Robert Martin

The figure didn't move, and neither did I. Something soft rubbed against my left ankle. I jumped. I couldn't help it. In the same instant there came the metallic coughing sound and there was a solid thud in the wooden wall behind me. Even as I dropped to a crouch I knew that the figure in the doorway was gone. Five feet away two small green eyes glowed at me. I saw the shadowy waving of a furry tail. "Hello," he said softly. "Kitty, you hear?"

The cat moved and stalked away into the darkness.

The door opened, and I stepped inside. I pushed it open and stepped inside. All around me there was the slow hiss of steam, the smell of oil and metal. Beneath a light stood a little man wearing overalls and a peaked cap. He gazed at me calmly and said, "Evening, mister."

"Hello. Did you see anyone just now?"

"I don't know you," he said. "What's your name?"

"Bennett. I'm a new salesman looking for a job. I snatched a name. For Mr. Masters."

"A name? No mind reader. I'm a licensed stationary engineer— boiler fireman to you. Sure, Logan was here."

"When was he here?"

"Short spell ago. He was taking a stroll through the works like he sometimes does on my shift."

"Where did he go?" It was rude of me, I knew.

"That way." He pointed to a door beyond the boiler. "The last thing he said was, 'Albert, you're doing a fine job for the company, and I want you to know that.'" spurt track running along the side of a platform. I flashed the light into the open door of the nearest car, and moved along to the others. The light lit the fence, showed a three-foot hole cut into twisted wire, a hole big enough for a man to crawl through. The cut ends of the wire gleamed brightly. Freshly cut wire. Was this where he'd entered with his fancy gun?

I went back to Ackerman's office and paused by the door. From inside came the muted clatter of a typewriter. I turned the knob and entered.

Dorothy Donovan looked up from her typewriter. "That's the second time you've walked in without knocking."

"Sorry. Working overtime tonight."

"Just a few letters. I didn't get finished this afternoon." Hastily she began to roll the paper from the machine.

I beat her to it. I grasped the paper, a single sheet, no carbon or second sheet, and pulled it out. She reached for it and said sharply, "Give me that!"

"It was half covered with single-spaced typing, but it was not a letter; it was one sentence, repeated over and over: 'Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party.'"

She flushed and said defensively, "All right, it's not a letter. I just came out here tonight to be alone and to think."

"About your boss?"

"About Howard, yes. I called the hospital. He—he may die."

"Okay." At the door I turned. "By the way, were you down in the factory tonight?"

She looked up quickly. "No. Why do you ask?"

"Just wondered."

I said to the guard at the gate, "I hear Mr. Masters was here tonight."

He nodded. "He left a few minutes ago."

"What time did Mrs. Donovan come in?"

He consulted a log sheet. "Nine o'clock."

"Anyone else go in—besides the regular crew?"

He sighed and looked at the sheet again. "Well, Mr. Quincy was in, and so was Mr. Varney. They've both left now."

He ran a finger down the sheet. "A truck came with a load of lumber. Albert Meyer's grandson brought out his lunch box, which Albert forgot. Three other trucks picked up shipments. That's about all, except you."

"And this is the only entrance that's open?"

"That's right. They gotta come through this gate, or climb the fence, and that would be rough. I'd hate to try it."

I didn't doubt the guard, but he was not aware of the hole in the fence.

It was 11 o'clock when I entered the lobby of the Maple Inn. There was a message for me to call Mr. Masters. Behind me a voice called, "Bennett, wait."

I turned and waited. I didn't know where he'd come from, but John Simmons was hurrying toward me. He needed a shave and his tie was twisted. "Bennett, I want to talk to you."

He eyed me a moment. Then he glanced quickly around, took a deep, ragged breath and said in a low, hoarse voice, "Give me back my money."

I lifted his hand from my arm. "What scared you off?"

"I don't understand. I just decided that it was—sort of underhanded."

"Quite noble of you. Where have you been this evening?"

"I've been right here, waiting for you."

"Aren't you interested in all this?"

"What're you talking about? I want my money."

(To Be Continued)

The Yankee surveyor who plotted Grant's victory, is said to have been responsible for naming the county after General U. S. Grant and the county seat after General Sheridan when the county was formed February 4, 1869, from territory taken from Hot Springs, Jefferson and Saline counties.

RE-VIEWING THE TROOPS

OUTDOORS

with John Alden Knight

Why is it, I wonder, that most of us postpone the overhaul of our fishing tackle until the very last minute? The long winter evenings pass, slowly enough, goodness knows, so that diversion of any kind should be welcome. Yet most of us, typically, I suppose, of all humans who are inherently lazy, postpone our tackle chores until time is very much the essence of the matter.

It does not pay to postpone tackle overhaul. Dirt and grease in reels and not dressed for the winter, tend to take on reel-coil and, in the case of fly lines, come off like watch springs.

Of course, since the advent of glass rods and nylon lines, tackle overhaul is not the onerous chore it used to be. Glass does not disintegrate as does untended bamboo. Just the same, it is a good plan to go over your rods.

First off, take a look at the ferrules. Chances are that they do not fit smoothly as they did when they were new. That can be remedied rather easily. Don't—

I repeat, DON'T—remove grease and dirt from a ferrule by means of an abrasive. Those ferrules fitted perfectly when they were new. Instead of scrubbing them with sandpaper, emery paper or steel wool, simply clean them with alcohol, lighter fuel or one of the volatile plastic solvents. Clean both male and female ferrules thoroughly. You will find that they fit smoothly, just as they used to.

Once the ferrules are in working order, take a look at the guides. These, as you may know, have the distressing tendency to develop flat spots through line wear, and each flat spot has a knife-blade edge which can ruin a line all too quickly. So look over your guides (best do it with a magnifying glass) and replace the worn ones.

Your reels, of course, should be stripped down and cleaned completely in some good grease solvent. Inescapably, oil and grease in your reel collect a certain amount of dust and grit during the course of a season. This combination acts as an efficient abrasive and if allowed to remain in the reel will do much damage to bearings.

In the matter of lines, your gear could stand a bit of inspection and revision. Since the advent of nylon and dacron, silk and linen have been pretty much relegated to the discard. These two synthetic materials have been a welcome addition to the angler's kit.

However, if you are under the impression that nylon and dacron are indestructible, you had better change your ideas. Any material is prone to the effects of fatigue. Thus, a last year's casting line is not quite as dependable as a new one. Casting lines don't cost very much so play safe and equip your reels with new ones.

With your fly lines, of course, the critical aspect is a dual one—finish and reel coil. Lines left on reels over the winter are apt to develop flat spots. These can be smoothed out by applying a liberal coat of line dressing, working it in thoroughly with the fingers, and then polishing the line with a fairly hard cloth.

Reel coils usually corrects itself while the line is being polished and the little flat remains can be removed by mild stretching. Warning—in stretching to remove reel coil, don't exert enough

DOGS

LIFE'S SADDEST SIGHT

The world knows no meaner man than the dog deserter. The world sees no sadder sight than the abandoned dog along the highway racing madly or hunched in agonizing fear that he has missed the automobile with his loved one in it or the forlorn little creature waiting anxiously for food or water on the step of an empty house refusing to budge from the spot.

Try to think for a moment of some of the reasons why dogs are abandoned. Did the dog bark? Was he ill? Or was he just too much trouble? Proper training and care could overcome these feeble excuses—training and care that every dog deserves. A dog, like a child, does not understand unless taught right from wrong. A well trained dog is a happy dog whose only aim is to please his master.

If for some valid reason dogs can't accompany their owners when moving to new locales or if circumstances prevent owners from continuing to take proper care of them, human self-respect demands that an animal be provided for. Dogs can always be taken to a pet adoption center or the local humane society.

To those who have respect for and have experienced a dog's companionship it is inconceivable that anyone could abandon a pet. But they do, sometimes. And usually the only thing that can be done is to step in and help the pet.

Don't look at an abandoned dog sorrowfully and then move on; contact the dog authorities and see that it is properly taken care of. A moment of your time could save a dog's life.

THE LAST SUPPER

What a significant meal for these twelve men! What a privilege to be in such high company! They were chosen to carry on God's work and to help bring in His kingdom. Can we hear him say, as Dr. Gordon did, "I have no other plan, gentlemen, I am depending on you." Imagine the seriousness of the situation: Jesus was through. Tomorrow He would die on the Cross. These twelve imperfect men must carry on. One loved his money, one was afraid, two had unruly tempers, and the others sometimes ran away. But Jesus loved them and needed them as He needs you and me. His kingdom must come on earth. Thus, the Lord has no other plan but to count on you and me. The Last Supper has become a continuing supper. Churches call their members together about their Lord, and administer the ordinance, saying, "this do in remembrance of me."

You In The Church
